

Sung Yeon Choi-Morrow
Community Organizer

Sung Yeon Choi-Morrow is a Community Organizer with Asian American Institute in Chicago. Sung Yeon is responsible for connecting with members of the Asian American community across the Chicagoland area to engage them in issues that concern and affect them. She works in coalition with various Asian American community organizers around issues such as immigration reform. Having grown up in Korea, India and parts of Southeast Asia, she loves being able to connect with and work with a diverse range of Asian Americans.

Sung Yeon has a B.A. in Political Science and Urban Studies and recently graduated with a Masters in Divinity from McCormick Theological Seminary. Her interest in Asian American communities and political and civic engagement developed during college years when she coordinated exit polling and poll monitoring for Chinatown and other Asian-American precincts in Chicago for the 2004 presidential elections as an intern at Asian American Institute.

On her spare time, Sung Yeon enjoys spending time with her family- mostly her husband Joseph, and friends. She enjoys cooking and all things culinary as well as having people around her dining table to share a meal. She also enjoys running and loves a good conversation on politics, culture and people.
